COVID-19 Business Losses

Romanucci & Blandin is proud to represent hundreds of businesses like restaurants, fitness centers and other service industry companies in their fight to receive financial payments from their commercial insurance companies for losses suffered during the Covid-19 pandemic. Business shutdowns directed by state or local governments led to staggering losses for many businesses, especially restaurants. These losses were especially challenging for small businesses or family-owned companies. Our clients did the responsible thing and purchased business insurance prior to the pandemic, but when they needed it their claims were denied.

Our legal team has filed multiple lawsuits against individual insurance companies, and we are committed to securing much-needed economic justice for our clients.
